I have following script to measure time on each page, but I am not getting correct results. http://jsfiddle.net/apffh/4/ I know it is tricky to get accurate time but I need something to track how much time spent on each tab. Any help will be appreciated. A: Solution: http://jsfiddle.net/apffh/5/ This will give you accurate results of time spent on each tab. I am using console.time() and console.timeEnd() to measure time. Edited my fiddle for future visitors. Q: viewing multiple indexes in one View I have a song list page that lists the songs by different artists and allows the user to add their new songs to the database. I was wondering if it is possible to display all the artists in one view, as opposed to having them on a separate page, that is because I will eventually have more than 20 artists listed and listing them all on one page will probably slow things down a bit. I know that I can easily select each artist's album on their own page as a separate query and then display the correct songs for that particular artist on the same page, or i can include the artist's details on their song details page using the artist ID. But is it possible to put all of the artists together in one page? A: Yes, use union. For example: SELECT Album, Artist, Song_Name FROM Artists_Albums UNION SELECT Album, Artist, Song_Name FROM Artists_Songs But, I would not recommend this approach, as it is likely to slow down your site. true false @color/colorPrimary @color/colorPrimaryDark @color/colorAccent Particleboard, sometimes also known as particle board, chipboard, and plywood, is a composite material made from wood particles mixed with a binder and pressed under high pressure and temperature to form a solid sheet product.
